THE NET

Lots of people use the Internet, or the Net, as it 1. is called (call). They use it as an encyclopaedia for information, as well as for communication. In 1969, when the Net 2. was invented (invent), it had a more limited purpose. The American Defence Department 3. created (create) it as a way of passing on secret information. On many occasions, secret information 4. had to be passed on (had to / pass on) to other departments. It 5. could not be sent (could not / send) by radio or telephone, because these methods 6. weren't considered (not consider) safe. The Net solved the problem. Its popularity as a means of communication spread quickly. At this moment, millions of e-mail messages 7. are being sent (send) by businesses and private individuals all over the world. Many believe that, in the future, letter writing and telephones 8. will be replaced (replace) entirely by e-mail.
